

From: catherinebroad comment-reply@wordpress.com
Subject: [catherinebroad] Comment: ""This could be the result of the shittiest police work ever.""
Date: August 31, 2020 at 3:55 PM
To: catherine.broad@yahoo.com

Respond to this comment by replying above this line

New comment on catherinebroad

Paul Jolliffe commented on "This could be the result of the shittiest police work ever."

This comment from a reader is powerful and makes some very good points. Rather than having it buried in the comment section, I ...

Cathy,

I wrote years ago that this case was NOT investigated back in the 1970's. This was NOT a "totally shitty job" - no this was deliberate. The "solution" ("well, he got away, and we just don't know who dunnit") was intentional and calculated.

(As a side note, I believe that even the publication of the 1980 pseudonymous book, "Michael Parrott's" "The Oakland County Child Killer" was an attempt to both reveal and conceal at the same time. If Bruce Danto was indeed the author, then he was part of a cover up.)

Those with the authority to direct the investigation made sure that no real leads would be developed and that the focus would remain on dead ends (the AMC Blue Gremlin is still what people remember about the case to this day!)

Why?

To prevent any embarrassing disclosures that would reflect badly on law enforcement, particularly those agencies, local, state and federal who had any connection to anyone who was a part of the OCCK ring.

In short, if any agency had any informant who was in any way connected to the murders of little kids, then those agencies would move heaven and earth - forever! - to prevent that information from ever becoming public.

View Comment

Trash | Mark as Spam

More information about Paul Jolliffe